

PASTOR'S WIFE TO RETURN "FOR CHILDREN'S SAKE"

Mrs. Durea's Parents Turn Her
Picture to Wall in Brooklyn Home.

VER NOOY HESITATES.

Woman Denies They Elope
and Hopes She Will Find Husband Changed.

Mrs. Clark Durea, wife of the pastor of a Holiness mission in Monticello, N. Y., expects to return to him today from Rutherford, N. J., where she and Earl Ver Nooy went after their elopement. Ver Nooy is uncertain about returning to "face the music."

The couple have been occupying separate rooms, and insist their departure was "a platonic excursion." Mrs. Durea said she went away because she could no longer stand her "religious fanatic" of a husband. Ver Nooy said in his case it was "too much mother-in-law." Mrs. Durea's nine-year-old daughter, Gladys, accompanied the couple in their flight and has been occupying a room with her mother.

Mrs. Durea insisted it was not an elopement, as her husband cooked her breakfast and kissed her goodby before she left and knew she was going with Ver Nooy. Insisting that there was no scandal, she said, "My husband asked me to let him know where we were when we got settled, and I told so. I am going back to him for the sake of the children, and I hope the past will be forgotten and he will be a changed man."

There is another phase to the affair. In a comfortable, well furnished apartment of a small, detached house in Brooklyn, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Darling, an elderly couple, look with tear-dimmed eyes at a picture of their only child, a daughter, that is, in fact, turned toward the wall.

Seated between Mr. and Mrs. Darling at their dining table is an eight-year-old boy who looks at the picture of his sister with a sad expression. He is the son of Mrs. Darling, who accompanied his mother and nine-year-old sister Gladys when Mrs. Durea left her husband's home with Ver Nooy.

The expedition was nothing more than a vacation trip. Weeks before school closed his mother had written to his grandmother, Mrs. Darling, that he would spend the vacation period at the Darling home in Brooklyn. It was two years since he had seen either of his grandparents. They, as well as he, had been eagerly looking forward to the visit.

"Papa did not say much of anything when we came away," Ross remarked to a reporter. "He just stood at the door and said goodby."

"When the automobile drove up here," explained the boy's grandmother, "we were naturally pleased and surprised. Our daughter had not said just how nor when Ross would arrive. Then, too, it was a year past Easter since we had even seen her or the little girl."

"We asked whose car they came in. Our daughter replied that it belonged to the neighbor who had brought them down, Mr. Ver Nooy. She said they were going right back and that later she would return for Ross. They drove away, taking Gladys with them. Our daughter so seldom writes that we were not surprised to receive no letter from her. We naturally supposed that she had returned home, that was two weeks ago. When the newspapers told of her elopement with this Ver Nooy, we were horrified. We didn't know what to think."

"You can see how I feel," interrupted Grandma Darling, pointing toward the picture turned to face the wall. "I cannot say that I am angry; I am stunned—heartbroken. To lose a loved one by death would be easier to bear than by such means as this."

"She was our only child—our daughter!" whispered Grandma Darling.

"But I must admit that I think her husband was largely to blame," suddenly declared the erring woman's mother, leaning forward in his chair and speaking with conviction. "It isn't me, that's the trouble. I am not a good man. He was never unkind, but one cannot live in this world on religion alone. Our son-in-law always says that the Lord will provide. 'I have noticed that the Lord doesn't seem to provide very well for people who don't make some effort to provide for themselves.'"

"Our daughter has never had the comforts with which we should have liked to see her surrounded. She has never complained, nor confided in us, for the reason that she knew how opposed we were to her marriage. Our objections were based solely upon the conviction that Durea would not make her happy; that he would never be able to provide properly for her. He is a religious student; not a business man. He ought never to have married."

"Anyway," spoke up the boy, "I know papa won't care if I stay here with grandma and grandpa. I like them and they like me, and I can help them, lots. I belong to the Boy Scouts and I know how to cook. I'd rather stay here with grandma than any place else I know."

BERLIN DICKERS FOR CABLES

Authorities Also Discuss Wireless Station With American Companies.

BERLIN, July 18.—In addition to negotiations between the imperial authorities and representatives of the Mackay Company regarding the laying of a direct cable between Germany and the United States, the Lokal-Anzeiger says similar conversations have been requested by the Western Union and the Commercial Cable Companies.

The newspaper adds that negotiations are proceeding with two American companies for the establishment of an American wireless station in Germany.

20,897 NEW HOMES UNDER EXEMPTION

Construction in the City Since
Feb. 25 Nearly Doubled
1920 Record.

Plans for more than $100,000,000 worth of new homes in the city have been filed since the Tax Exemption Law took effect Feb. 25, according to Borough President Curran of Manhattan. Mr. Curran, who fathered the tax exemption proposal, said these will accommodate 20,897 families. Last year during a similar period—from Feb. 25 to July 9—construction was for only 6,604 families.

"This is an increase," said Mr. Curran, "of 370 per cent. in money laid out and of 216 per cent. in families provided for. Of the 20,897 families planned for during these nineteen weeks, 11,902 families will live in houses and 8,995 in apartments. 'The greatest activity is in Brooklyn, which leads all the other boroughs with 8,480 families provided for, while Queens comes second with 5,061.'"

The new housing accommodations will be distributed as follows among the five boroughs:

Borough	Houses	Apartment	Total
Manhattan	1,704	1,704	3,408
Brooklyn	5,214	3,266	8,480
Queens	2,861	2,200	5,061
Richmond	4,453	4,542	8,995
Total	14,232	11,663	25,895

"It must be remembered that no new house can take advantage of the tax exemption for ten years up to Jan. 1, 1932, unless its construction is actually under way before April 1, 1927," Mr. Curran added. "That leaves a very short period of getting under way before the winter sets in. That is the dead line."

RHINE SOLDIER DIES UNDER BURNING CAR.

COBLENTZ, July 18.—James Higgins, a member of the Motor Transport Company of the American forces in Germany, whose home was at No. 55 Bennett Street, Dubuque, Ia., was burned to death last night under an overturned motor truck.

When the spill started Higgins gave the warning to a number of men who were in the truck, enabling all of them to escape. He was caught under the machine, however, and was fatally burned when the engine back-fired, setting fire to the gasoline.
